Villa MANGIACANE

Villa Mangiacane's compelling history dates back to the late 14th century. The villa was built by the Machiavelli family and designed by Michelangelo, the famed Italian sculptor, painter and architect of the High Renaissance.

Because of the historical significance of the villa's owners and architects, the original building plans for improvements are housed at the Uffizi Gallery in Florence. The Machiavelli family sold the villa in 1646 to the distinguished aristocratic Mazzei family. The Mazzei were the longest serving owners of the villa, spanning over three centuries until the mid 20th century. In 1956, the villa was sold to Guidi da Bagno, whose origins are from an ancient noble family. Bagno held the property for only two decades until 1979 when it was bought by the di Leo family.

In 2001, the property was finally acquired by its current owners, who invested in a multi-million dollar renovation plan to restore the villa to its former splendour. The restoration was completed in 2007 and the villa opened as a small luxury hotel. Villa Mangiacane is now available exclusively for private rentals, ideal for prestigious luxury stays and unforgettable celebrations.

This book was compiled to provide a glimpse into the fascinating life story of this historic building and some of the famous figures associated with it, through the tumultuous historical events it has not only witnessed, but survived. If only its walls could speak, what tales could they tell?
