Sitting on the northernmost tip of Africa, looking out across the Strait of Gibraltar, Tangiers has a romance that is distinctly more glamorous than its origins as a fishing port. It is, in part, the architecture, with Moorish arches, Art Deco facades and enchanting Andalusian Courtyards. But since the 1950's Tangiers has drawn into its snaking streets and souks a crowd of writers, artists, beatniks and creatives who have transformed historical houses into cool new hangouts.
