“After leasuring back, I do not know a more delicious occupation than eating, of course proper eating. The appetite is for the stomach what love is for the heart.

The empty stomach represents the woodwind or the small flute, in which grumbles the discontent or yelps envy; on the opposite, a full stomach is the triangle of pleasure or the harpsichords of joy.

Eating, loving, singing and digesting are the four acts of that comic opera which is life and which vanishes like the bubbles of a glass of champagne.

Whoever lets it go away without tasting it, is mad”.

G. Rossini
